

May 31, 2011

Mike Casey
Casey, O'Malley Associates
mike@caseyomalleyassociates.com

Course: 2011 COA Conference (live educational offering)
Approved: up to 24 CE Hours (total number of hours of education attainable during 3 days)
Validity: October 2 - 6, 2011

Dear Mike:

Upon official review of the course material, speaker qualifications, class length, etc. for content, quality and pertinence to home inspection professionals, we are pleased to inform you that participants who successfully attend the above referenced program are eligible to receive the number of Continuing Education Credits (CEs) noted above.

Conferences do qualify for ASHI CE credit with proof of attendance. The sponsor is required to have attendees sign in at each class and upon completion of the conference, send all class sign-in sheets to ASHI. CE approval will become void at any time if the content or format is significantly altered. It is the offering entity's responsibility to notify ASHI in writing of any such changes, and to re-submit for re-approval if necessary.

ASHI encourages course sponsors to advertise CE Approval. It is critical that any and all advertisements must clearly state the number of CEs the course has been granted. All current ASHI members with membership standing for one year or longer are required to earn a total of 20 CEs on a yearly basis. ASHI-approved CEs are invalid for non-ASHI members.

Advertisements stating that a particular class or seminar provides "ASHI training" or has been "approved for x# of ASHI credits" are misleading, and are not permitted. Advertising of this type will result in suspension or revocation of approval. The appropriate wording for any advertisement is as follows: "X Course is approved for x# of ASHI® Continuing Education Credits"

If you are planning to offer a specialty certification, and/or an examination is to be administered, you must clearly state prior to the beginning of class all requirements for achievement including the passing grade that must be achieved for successful completion.

The sponsor is required to provide certificates of completion to all eligible attendees including the student's name, course date, number of earned CEs, and signature of an authorized person for the issuing agency.

We are very pleased to notify you of your CE approval. Please feel free to call on us with any questions or comments you may have.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read "M. George".

Michele George
Education Manager

July 19, 2011

Mike Casey
Casey O'Malley Associates
Mike@Caseyomalleyassociates.com

Course: Commercial Inspection Management Certificate course (live class w/on-line exam)
Approved: 16 CE Hours
Validity: October 4, 2011

Dear Mike:

Upon official review of the course material, speaker qualifications, class length, etc. for content, quality and pertinence to home inspection professionals, we are pleased to inform you that participants who successfully attend the above referenced program are eligible to receive the number of Continuing Education Credits (CEs) noted above.

CE approval will become void at any time if the content or format is significantly altered. It is the offering entity's responsibility to notify ASHI in writing of any such changes, and to re-submit for re-approval if necessary.

ASHI encourages course sponsors to advertise CE Approval. It is critical that any and all advertisements must clearly state the number of CEs the course has been granted. All current ASHI members with membership standing for one year or longer are required to earn a total of 20 CEs on a yearly basis. ASHI-approved CEs are invalid for non-ASHI members.

Advertisements stating that a particular class or seminar provides "ASHI training" or has been "approved for x# of ASHI credits" are misleading, and are not permitted. Advertising of this type will result in suspension or revocation of approval. The appropriate wording for any advertisement is as follows: "X Course is approved for x# of ASHI® Continuing Education Credits"

If you are planning to offer a specialty certification, and/or an examination is to be administered, you must clearly state prior to the beginning of class all requirements for achievement including the passing grade that must be achieved for successful completion.

The sponsor is required to provide certificates of completion to all eligible attendees including the student's name, course date, number of earned CEs, and signature of an authorized person for the issuing agency.

We are very pleased to notify you of your CE approval. Please feel free to call on us with any questions or comments you may have.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read "M. George".

Michele George
Education Manager

July 7, 2011

Mike Casey
Casey O'Malley Associates
Mike@Caseyomalleyassociates.com

ICC Residential Combination Inspector Designation Exams Review course (live class w/on-line exam)
Approved: 16 CE Hours
Validity: October 4-5, 2011

Dear Mike:

Upon official review of the course material, speaker qualifications, class length, etc. for content, quality and pertinence to home inspection professionals, we are pleased to inform you that participants who successfully attend the above referenced program are eligible to receive the number of Continuing Education Credits (CEs) noted above.

CE approval will become void at any time if the content or format is significantly altered. It is the offering entity's responsibility to notify ASHI in writing of any such changes, and to re-submit for re-approval if necessary.

ASHI encourages course sponsors to advertise CE Approval. It is critical that any and all advertisements must clearly state the number of CEs the course has been granted. All current ASHI members with membership standing for one year or longer are required to earn a total of 20 CEs on a yearly basis. ASHI-approved CEs are invalid for non-ASHI members.

Advertisements stating that a particular class or seminar provides "ASHI training" or has been "approved for x# of ASHI credits" are misleading, and are not permitted. Advertising of this type will result in suspension or revocation of approval. The appropriate wording for any advertisement is as follows: "X Course is approved for x# of ASHI® Continuing Education Credits"

If you are planning to offer a specialty certification, and/or an examination is to be administered, you must clearly state prior to the beginning of class all requirements for achievement including the passing grade that must be achieved for successful completion.

The sponsor is required to provide certificates of completion to all eligible attendees including the student's name, course date, number of earned CEs, and signature of an authorized person for the issuing agency.

We are very pleased to notify you of your CE approval. Please feel free to call on us with any questions or comments you may have.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read "M. George".

Michele George
Education Manager

June 6, 2011

Mike Casey
Casey O'Malley Associates
Mike@Caseyomalleyassociates.com

Course: Gas Appliance Inspection Certificate course (live class w/on-line exam)
Approved: 8 CE Hours
Validity: October 4, 2011

Dear Mike:

Upon official review of the course material, speaker qualifications, class length, etc. for content, quality and pertinence to home inspection professionals, we are pleased to inform you that participants who successfully attend the above referenced program are eligible to receive the number of Continuing Education Credits (CEs) noted above.

CE approval will become void at any time if the content or format is significantly altered. It is the offering entity's responsibility to notify ASHI in writing of any such changes, and to re-submit for re-approval if necessary.

ASHI encourages course sponsors to advertise CE Approval. It is critical that any and all advertisements must clearly state the number of CEs the course has been granted. All current ASHI members with membership standing for one year or longer are required to earn a total of 20 CEs on a yearly basis. ASHI-approved CEs are invalid for non-ASHI members.

Advertisements stating that a particular class or seminar provides "ASHI training" or has been "approved for x# of ASHI credits" are misleading, and are not permitted. Advertising of this type will result in suspension or revocation of approval. The appropriate wording for any advertisement is as follows: "X Course is approved for x# of ASHI® Continuing Education Credits"

If you are planning to offer a specialty certification, and/or an examination is to be administered, you must clearly state prior to the beginning of class all requirements for achievement including the passing grade that must be achieved for successful completion.

The sponsor is required to provide certificates of completion to all eligible attendees including the student's name, course date, number of earned CEs, and signature of an authorized person for the issuing agency.

We are very pleased to notify you of your CE approval. Please feel free to call on us with any questions or comments you may have.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in black ink that reads "M. George".

Michele George
Education Manager

June 6, 2011

Mike Casey
Casey O'Malley Associates
Mike@Caseyomalleyassociates.com

Course: Pool and Spa Inspection Certificate Course (live class w/on-line exam)
Approved: 8 CE Hours
Validity: October 3, 2011

Dear Mike:

Upon official review of the course material, speaker qualifications, class length, etc. for content, quality and pertinence to home inspection professionals, we are pleased to inform you that participants who successfully attend the above referenced program are eligible to receive the number of Continuing Education Credits (CEs) noted above.

CE approval will become void at any time if the content or format is significantly altered. It is the offering entity's responsibility to notify ASHI in writing of any such changes, and to re-submit for re-approval if necessary.

ASHI encourages course sponsors to advertise CE Approval. It is critical that any and all advertisements must clearly state the number of CEs the course has been granted. All current ASHI members with membership standing for one year or longer are required to earn a total of 20 CEs on a yearly basis. ASHI-approved CEs are invalid for non-ASHI members.

Advertisements stating that a particular class or seminar provides "ASHI training" or has been "approved for x# of ASHI credits" are misleading, and are not permitted. Advertising of this type will result in suspension or revocation of approval. The appropriate wording for any advertisement is as follows: "X Course is approved for x# of ASHI® Continuing Education Credits"

If you are planning to offer a specialty certification, and/or an examination is to be administered, you must clearly state prior to the beginning of class all requirements for achievement including the passing grade that must be achieved for successful completion.

The sponsor is required to provide certificates of completion to all eligible attendees including the student's name, course date, number of earned CEs, and signature of an authorized person for the issuing agency.

We are very pleased to notify you of your CE approval. Please feel free to call on us with any questions or comments you may have.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read "M. George".

Michele George
Education Manager